In Alaska, there are 66,800 people with diabetes and over 22,000 of them do not even know it! Services provided by the American Diabetes Association serving Alaska have never been in greater demand. Some of the major programs include free education, counseling and referral services to people throughout the state, public information and screening, professional education and a summer camp program for children with diabetes. In addition the Association acts as an advocate for Alaskans affected by diabetes in cases of discrimination and is proactive in identifying and resolving social issues impacting people with diabetes.

Funds raised at the Great Alaska Beer and Barley Wine Festival benefit the children in Alaska who have diabetes. There are children from communities all over Alaska who attend the summer camp program which provides the opportunity to interact with other children who have diabetes and experience all the usual camp activities while learning how to control diabetes. Children who learn how to take care of themselves are less likely to develop the devastating complications of diabetes and lead healthier lives. The partnership between Aurora Productions and the American Diabetes Association makes a difference in the lives of Alaskans who have diabetes.

About this year's special guest, Steven Pauwels, Brewmaster, Boulevard Brewing Company!

Steven Pauwels is Brewmaster at Boulevard Brewing Company, the Midwest's largest independent brewery. He has substantially increased production for Boulevard under his tenure and also developed 13 additions for Boulevard's brand lineup, including the critically acclaimed Smokestack Series line of artisanal beers.

Boulevard's founder and president, John McDonald recruited Pauwels from his native Belgium to come to Kansas City in 1999. Pauwels grew up surrounded by the brewing industry. His father worked for Eeklo's regional brewery, Brouwerij Kruger, where Steven worked summers while attending school. He fondly remembers "smelling the beer in the air". Pauwels holds degrees in Biochemical Engineering from KaHo Sint-Leiven and Business Administration from Mercator, both in Gent, Belgium.

Steven's philosophy is for home brewers is "Find Your Own Path" In his words...dogmatic adherence to styles can hamper a commercial brewer, but can be fatal to home brewers. I talk to home brewers that want to clone some of our beers. I say, can't you see the luxury you have? You don't have to imitate. Make your own styles. Be creative. Styles help initially. It's something that you have to go through as a home brewer. But at one point, you've got to say, forget it, I know what I'm doing now, and I'm going to do my own thing.

We are very fortunate to have Steven join us this year. Stop by Boulevard Brewing Company's booth to say hello and have a taste of some of his award winning brews!

Jim Roberts on beer

If you're reading this, you're at the 2012 Great Alaska Beer and Barley Wine Festival, and this guide is just one of the subtle amenities that will enhance your true Alaska beer drinking experience. Welcome to a local theater of known and fabulous new beer selections that are set forth before you to not only blissfully explore, but to enhance your knowledge, experience and mastery of global beer in what's become the biggest annual beer event in the state. The hallmark aspect of this event is the showcasing of virtually all of our locally produced craft beers under one roof. Sure, you might be used to your favorites from local breweries here in town, and from those that serve Anchorage because these breweries are within a scant distribution chain that generally extends through our road system. But, only at this event do our remote breweries that are off the grid show up in force and provide you with all of what defines Alaska's rich tapestry of fermented goodness.

Get what you can from Kodiak Brewing Company, Baranof Island Brewing Company, Haines Brewing Company and others that aren't normally distributed here. This is your only annual chance to experience the best of the best from our far-flung, remote brewing outposts that produce regionally-inspired suds that likely you've had scant exposure to. And that's the beauty of this gig. Beyond that, our local distributors have weighed in with selections from around the nation and around the world that will not only tempt, but temper your palate. Look for global specialty beers from Specialty Imports of Alaska, K&L Distributors and Odom Alaska, all of which scour the globe to bring us the beers that respect our sophisticated palates that demand more and more every year as the benchmark for good beer notches ever higher here at home. In all, close to 200 beers await your choice, inspection, enjoyment and hopefully some new endearment. Talk to your server about what you're drinking. In addition to this program as a guide, your servers are selected because they know the products they're so fond to share with you. In many of the booths, you're likely to find the brewers themselves, all of which are proud of what they produce and are eager to garner your feedback about their handiwork.

In addition to your program and your commemorative sampling glass, you're afforded with enough sampling tickets to allow you to explore far and wide. These tickets are also sufficient to guarantee that using them will require you to have set up or obtain safe transportation from this event to your home. This is a designated driver event and your actions before, during and after the event represent Alaska's beer drinking community as a whole, and it's your duty to protect that through metered consumption, being cordial to your servers and others that vie for samples and other community members you encounter throughout the entirety of your experience. It is my hope, and the hope of the event organizer and the breweries and distributors that bring their product to you that you go away with an enhanced understanding of and love for the beverage that increasingly provides richness and diversity to our great state. It's all about beer, so go forward, chart your journey and continue to support the beer industry that serves you so well right here at home.

San Francisco, CA www.21st-amendment.com

21ST SAN FRANCISCO AMENDMENT

The 21st Amendment Brewery offers a variety of award winning house made brews and American grilled cuisine with a full bar in a comfortable loft like setting. In 2000, Nico Freccia and Shaun O'Sullivan founded the 21st Amendment Brewery in San Francisco's historic South Park neighborhood. The popular brewpub is now at the heart of the new city center and only two blocks from the San Francisco Giants baseball park.

Around the turn of the 20th century, in the year 1900, there were about 40 breweries operating just within the city limits of San Francisco (by comparison, today there are eight with a population more than double what it was in 1900). They realized that the brewery captured the essence of the neighborhoods of San Francisco. They were the local gathering places. Places to exchange ideas, debate politics and philosophy. Places for families to come together on weekends. Places that provided something unique—hand crafted beer that was different at every brewery and that defined the taste of a neighborhood. In 1920, Prohibition wiped out this culture and put the “local” out of business. For 13 years, social interaction was largely driven underground, to the speakeasies, where regular citizens became a nation of outlaws.

Alaskan Brewing Co.

Juneau, AK www.alaskanbeer.com

In 1986, the Alaskan Brewing Company became the 67th operating brewery in the United States and the only one in Alaska. Since that time Alaskan has become one of the top 15 craft breweries of the more than 1,500 nationwide. It is also the most award-winning craft brewery in the history of the Great American Beer Festival, with more than 40 medals to date. For 25 years now, Alaskan Brewing Company has been handcrafting some of the country's most award-winning beers in one of the most incredible settings on earth. The brewery is surrounded by the largest old-growth rainforest in the Northern Hemisphere and the 1,500 square-mile Juneau Ice Field.

The brewery's natural surroundings provide inspiration for the beers they make and the way they brew. From brewing with Sitka spruce tips and alder-smoked malt, to recycling CO2 and spent grain, the Alaskan Brewery maintains its commitment to environmental stewardship while providing a “taste of Alaska” to the Last Frontier and the western states. In addition to the award-winning Alaskan Barley Wine, enjoy the robust porter that is the hallmark of Alaskan Brewing Co. Brewed seasonally since 1988, Alaskan Smoked Porter becomes more complex with age, much like a vintage port. In 2010 alone, Alaskan Smoked Porter took gold in the smoked beer categories at the Great American Beer Festival, World Beer Cup and European Beer Star Awards.

Anchor Brewing Co.

San Francisco, CA www.anchorbrewing.com

Anchor began during the Gold Rush in 1896. The brewery burned down in the fires that followed the 1906 earthquake, but was rebuilt at a different location in 1907. There is no record of what Anchor did during Prohibition, but it resumed serving steam beer after Repeal, possibly as the only steam brewing company still in operation. However the brewery burned down yet again within the year, and it relocated once more. In 1965, Fritz Maytag bought the brewery, saving it from closure. It moved to its current location near Potrero Hill in 1979. During the 1980s Anchor Steam Beer began to achieve national notice and demand increased from only a few thousand cases per year that had been produced in the old location. It was the first of the modern microbreweries, and its success inspired many others to enter the brewing business. Anchor Steam derives its unusual name from the 19th century when "steam" seems to have been a nickname for beer brewed on the West Coast of America under primitive conditions and without ice. Although there are many theories, no one can say with certainty why the word "steam" came to be associated with beer. For many decades Anchor alone has used this quaint name for its unique beer. In modern times, "Steam" has become a trademark of Anchor Brewing.

Boulevard Brewing Company

Kansas City, MO www.boulevard.com

Founded in 1989, Boulevard Brewing Company has grown to become the largest specialty brewer in the Midwest. Our mission is simple: to produce fresh, flavorful beers using the finest traditional ingredients and the best of both old and new brewing techniques. Boulevard beers are known for their full flavor, distinctive character, and unsurpassed quality.

The Boulevard story begins in 1988, when founder John McDonald started construction of the brewery in a turn-of-the-century brick building on Kansas City’s historic Southwest Boulevard. A vintage Bavarian brewhouse was installed, and the first batches of beer were produced in the fall of 1989. That November, the first keg of Boulevard Pale Ale was delivered—in the back of John’s pickup truck—to a restaurant just a few blocks away. In 2006, a major expansion adjacent to the original brewery raised Boulevard’s brewing capacity to approximately 600,000 barrels per year—a sizable increase from the 6,000 barrels contemplated in John’s original business plan. The new brewing and packaging facility is a model of sustainable urban architecture and engineering; a three-story, 70,000 square foot building housing a new, state-of-the-art 150-barrel brewhouse.

BrewDog

Fraserburgh, Scotland www.brewdog.com

Martin and James were bored of the industrially brewed lagers and stuffy ales that dominate the UK market. We decided the best way to fix this undesirable predicament was to brew our own beers. Consequently in April 2007 BrewDog was born.

Both only 24 at the time, we leased a building, got some scary bank loans, spent all our money on stainless steel and started making some hardcore beers. Our artisan brewery produces small 5000 bottle batches and our investment in technologically advanced equipment allows us to keep precise control throughout and give us the flexibility to make any beer our minds can create. We have our own bottling line and everything is done on site, giving us complete control of the entire process.

The BrewDog team now consists of 14 beer nuts from 6 countries. This provides us with an immense amount of ideas, knowledge and talent from all corners of the globe. We are dedicated to making cool, contemporary and progressive beers showcasing some of the world’s classic beer styles. All with an innovative twist and customary BrewDog bite.

Bieres de Chimay

Abbey de Scourmont, Belgium www.chimay.be

In 1850 near Chimay, Trappist monks began building a Cistercian abbey and working and living off the land. In 1862, they brewed their own beer for the first time in accordance with ancient monastic tradition using natural fresh water from their land and a natural process involving top-fermentation followed by refermentation in the bottle. A strain of yeast, first isolated in 1948 by Father Theodore, gives Chimay its depth of character. The brewery has developed and today it is an example of the art of modern brewing. All authentic Trappist beers are brewed inside a Trappist monastery under the control and responsibility of a community of monks and financial return is mostly intended for social help and to assist their charitable foundations.

Grande Reserve is the dark, full bodied beer that has a fruity and delicious aroma and is a top shelf winner in the big, bold Belgian beer category. Aging this beer in the 750 ml or the magnum bottle for 3 to 10 years brings out a smooth rich flavor some experts have said to be like a port.

Firestone Walker Brewing Company brewed its first beer in 1996 in a small facility rented from the Firestone Vineyard estate in Santa Barbara County. In 2001 owners Adam Firestone and David Walker purchased the SLO Brewing Company located in Paso Robles, CA. Firestone Walker's ales are selectively fermented in the Firestone Union oak barrel brewing system. The Firestone Union incorporates 65-gallon, medium and heavy toast American oak barrels. Firestone Walker Brewing Company continues to grow as the palates of Americans migrate to craft beer. Our brew staff have picked up "Mid Size Brewery of the Year" at the World Beer Cup an unmatched three times.

JK's Scrumpy, the Orchard Gate

Flushing, MI www.organicscrumpy.com

First pressed back in the 1850's, this Original Hard-Cider has been made on our family-owned farm in Flushing, Michigan for over a hundred years. Not much has changed in the process since then. We use the same apples from the same orchards as my great-great grandfather did before the time of the Civil War. The sale of cider actually saved our farm during the Great Depression and during Prohibition people came from far and wide for our "Special Farm Cider." Our Orchard Gate Gold is the real thing. We grow, harvest, and press the apples right here on the farm. Our cider is not only natural, it is truly organic. It always has been. We use no insecticides in the farm orchards. Rather, I do what my grandfather did. I have a large flock of guinea fowl that wander about and eat the bugs. Fallen apples that have hit the ground are always a food source for pests, so I let my Berkshire pigs wander the orchard and eat the fallen apples.

Southwest of Brussels, in the Belgian town of Vlezenbeek, the Lindemans family has been farming and homebrewing as long as anyone can remember. Commercial brewing started in 1811. Lambic, or spontaneously fermented beers, are among the world's rarest. Made from local barley malt, unmalted wheat, aged hops and wild, airborne local yeast, these products mature in oak for nearly two years prior to release. Fruit is frequently added during secondary fermentation.

demand for beers which are more distinctive and generally more flavorful than those of the American mainstream has revived the long time micro-brewing tradition." Prior to prohibition it was common for each town to have its own brewery or brewpub. This came to an abrupt halt with prohibition in 1920. In 1982 California law was changed to allow breweries to sell their products from their on-site taverns if the taverns were also legitimate restaurants. In the past 30 years over 1,500 micro-breweries and brewpubs have been built all over America, especially on the west coast. These small breweries have sprung up to challenge the giants.

Anchorage, AK www.moosestooth.net

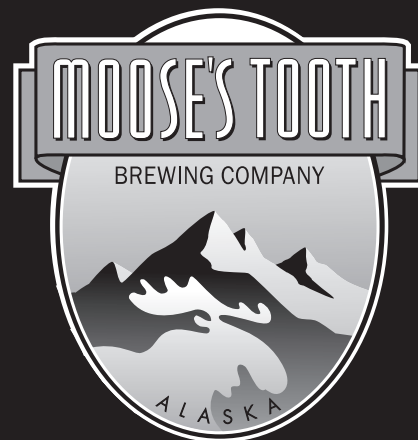

Moose's Tooth Brewing is nestled in Anchorage's bucolic Ship Creek Valley. It is home to five busy brewers who, in a typical year, brew about 40 different beers for your pleasure. Our beers are brewed in the Pacific Northwest-style; well-balanced and well-hopped. They are available by the pint, the growler or the five gallon keg at Moose's Tooth Pub and the Bear Tooth Theatrepub & Grill. You'll also find us on tap at finer bars and restaurants around town. Cheers!

Fairweather IPA

(India Pale Ale) OG 1064 ABV 6.4% IBU 64

Fairweather IPA is our signature brew: big, balanced and assertively hopped. It is surprisingly full bodied to balance the citrusy flavor, spicy finish and pleasantly lingering bitterness that result from its extravagant hop schedule.

Moylan's Brewery

Novato, CA www.moylans.com

In 1995 Moylan's Brewing Co. opened at Rowland Plaza, bringing Novato into the ranks of other world class brew towns like Portland, Oregon and Seattle, Washington. Brendan Moylan, the co-owner of Marin Brewing Company, brings more than 28 years of brewing experience to Novato, which began with his first home brewing kit one year after college. "One January I went out and bought the Christmas gift I really wanted: a beer brewing kit, and one thing led to another" Moylan said. "I got a degree in accounting and decided I didn't want to go there and started working for a beer importing company, then one day I walked into Buffalo Bill's brewpub in Hayward and my eyes got big and I knew it was what I wanted to do." After taking classes on brewing techniques at UC Davis, Moylan became a founding partner in Marin Brewing Company, which opened in April of 1989.

Ninkasi Brewing is located in Eugene, OR, and has been brewing high quality beers, in the Northwest style, since 2006. The Eugene location gives regional access to some of the highest quality brewing ingredients in the world, including pure cascade mountain water from the McKenzie River and hops from the Pacific Northwest. Our focus is on flavorful, balanced beers. The ancient Sumerians worshipped the beer they made, and praised the Goddess Ninkasi for the miracle of fermentation. Beer is a staple of civilization. Worship the Goddess.

We brew full flavored ales of character and balance, designed to accompany food. Visitors to Seattle will discover Pike ales on draft and in the bottle, in the top hotels, restaurants, alehouses and stores. A great place to experience them is at The Pike Pub, described by beer writer, Michael Jackson, as "A shrine to beer." Featured on draft, is our family of top fermented ales, including Pike Pale, IPA, Kilt Lifter Scotch Ale, Naughty Nellie Organic golden ale, XXXXX Extra Stout, Tandem Double Ale, Monk's Uncle Tripel Ale, and our new plus ultra, Old Bawdy Barley Wine. Our menu features foods to go with and often cooked with our beer. Guests are encouraged to learn how beer is brewed. Tours of our three story gravity flow steam powered brewhouse, fermentation cellar, and packaging room are fun and educational. Redhook

Woodinville, WA www.redhook.com

Paul Shipman and Gordon Bowker actually founded Redhook Ale Brewery in Seattle in May of 1981 for two reasons: The Pacific Northwest drank more draught beer than anywhere in the country and the import beer market was growing everywhere. In, 1982 the first Redhook Ale was poured that original Redhook Ale was modeled after spicy Belgian ales. Seattle beer drinkers met it with surprise and maybe a little confusion. They affectionately referred to it as "banana beer" because of its banana like flavor and aroma. Less than 1000 barrels were sold in the first year. Redhook bought the former home of the Seattle Electric Railway as its new location. Besides having great historical significance, it also kept Redhook near the community that supported it through those early years. The 26,000 square foot building allowed the company to build a rather charming brewpub named the Trolleyman. A state-of-the-art brewhouse was built in 1988 with help from a German company. The new equipment ensured product quality and consistency and made Redhook the most technically advanced craft brewery in North America. Interest and demand for craft beers continued to grow. To keep pace, Redhook built a second brewery in Woodinville, Washington and a third in Portsmouth, New Hampshire. With bi-coastal breweries, beer drinkers are guaranteed a fresh Redhook Ale no matter where they are in the United States.

ROGUE

Rogue Ales first brewpub was founded in 1988 in Ashland, Oregon, and was a 10bbl brewsystem. Rogue opened a second brewpub, 15bbl brewsystem, in May 1989 located in Newport, Oregon. Rogue is a small revolution, which expresses itself through handcrafted Ales, Porters, Stouts, Lagers and Spirits, and this is the way we conduct our business. The spirit of the Rogue brand, even the name, suggests doing things differently, a desire and a willingness to change the status quo. A Rogue Ale, Porter, Stout, Lager or Spirit is crafted to give it unique character, innovative in its makeup and brewing, a process that has not compromised quality. We believe if a Rogue Ale, Porter, Stout, Lager or Spirit cannot be all of these things, it should not be made at all. Rogue Brewery & House of Spirits is located in scenic Newport, Oregon, with additional outposts in Astoria, Eugene, Portland, Portland Airport, Issaquah, WA & San Francisco, CA.

Shmaltz Brewing Co.

San Francisco, CA www.shmaltzbrewing.com

Shmaltz Brewing Company is an American craft brewing company based in San Francisco, California that owns HE'BREW Beer and Coney Island Craft Lagers. Founded as "American Jewish Celebration Beer" by proprietor Jeremy Cowan, the company's beers now are distributed in over thirty-one U.S. states, Canada, and England. Shmaltz is known for blurring beer styles and using puns, art, history, and pop culture in every aspect of their products. As a contract brewer, Shmaltz buys space and ingredients at Mendocino Brewing Company and Mendocino's brewery staff brews

Shmaltz's proprietary recipes for both the HE'BREW Beer and Coney Island Craft Lagers lines. Shmaltz Brewing Company was recently recognized as "Best Craft Brewer" by Beverage World Magazine and ranked by craft beer consumer website RateBeer.com as one of the 100 "Best Brewers of 2011."

HE'BREW Beer began as a Chanukah experiment in 1996 when founder and proprietor Jeremy Cowan and friends squeezed pomegranates to produce juice for the first HE'BREW beer. Early distribution for this beer was done by Cowan himself out of the trunk of his grandmother's car in the San Francisco Bay Area. All HE'BREW Beers are certified Kosher by the Kosher Supervision of America.

Southern Tier Brewing Co.

Lakewood, NY www.southerntierbrewing.com

In operation since late 2002, Southern Tier Brewing Company has grown to produce over 30,000 barrels of beer annually. The hand crafted ales are now available in more than half of the United States, as well as parts of Australia, Denmark, Japan, Philippines, Singapore, Ontario, British Columbia, and the United Kingdom. Founders Phineas DeMink and Allen "Skip" Yahn started the brewery with the vision of reviving the practice of small batch brewing to a region rich in brewing tradition. Southern Tier immediately garnered regional attention and demand for the product was quickly outgrowing their modest facility. In 2009, a new 20,000 square foot building was built for the purpose of brewing innovative, high-quality beer to accommodate an expanding customer base. In this new facility, the small brewery was able to grow and offer the product both nationally and internationally, while still satisfying its loyal hometown fans.

Three Skulls Ales

Seattle, WA www.threeskullsales.com

Three Skulls Ales celebrates those scallywags who traveled the Caribbean Seas pillaging anything they could get their hands on. Of course we all know that those pirates who roamed the seas were a nasty lot. But they certainly did enjoy large amounts of good grog! We also celebrate those few women who took to the seas to join the men who thirsted for booty. They were as fierce as the men!

Unibroue

Chambly, Quebec, Canada
www.unibroue.com

Brewed using an age-old process of in-bottle refermentation, they are only partially filtered rather than totally filtered (which is the norm in today's beer industry). This means Unibroue beers keep all their protein and part of the yeast, producing a genuine upscale beer.

These beers are on fresh lees. The lees deposit themselves at the bottom of the bottle as result of refermentation and natural carbonation. The process is the same as with champagne; except with champagne, the yeast is removed, while with Unibroue beers the lees are left in the bottle. This method gives a very particular taste to the beer and provides a natural source of vitamin B. Every single beer is brewed in one batch and is not water-softened.

Unibroue's brewing methods were inspired by the great European brewing traditions and, in this respect, are one of a kind in North America. Our brewing methods are time consuming and costly. Given that the beers contain no chemical additives or preservatives, they require strict quality control. This all-natural brewing process is also why our beers are higher in alcohol content and can provide a rich flavour without the bitter aftertaste of conventional beers. Moreover, they have a longer shelf life and adapt very well to the room temperatures, unlike conventional beers. This competitive edge makes Unibroue products attractive to foreign distributors. Several prizes and distinctions have been awarded to our beers. Among its most important achievements, Unibroue was classified among the ten best breweries in the world in 1995 and 1996 by The Beverage Testing Institute of Chicago, which is known as the main reference in the brewing industry.

The monastery is located in the village of West Malle, Province of Antwerp, Belgium, and was founded in 1794. Both the Dubbel and the Tripel are considered by many tasters as the benchmarks for the style. Westmalle Dubbel was first brewed for consumption within the Abbey around 1836; Westmalle Tripel was introduced in 1934. All of Belgium's Trappist monasteries that produce beer are cloistered and usually closed to the general public. Westmalle is no exception. The brewhouse dates from the 1930s. The abbey, brewery, and dairy buildings all blend together into an admirable, cohesive structure. The best way to sample Westmalle's beers is at the beautiful Cafe Trappisten. The stars of the cafe are definitely the two Westmalle products, the Triple and the Dubbel.

Westmalle Tripel is a beautiful beer made with pale candy sugar. It has a very pale color produced from a mash of light pilsener malts. Styrian Goldings hops are used along with some German varieties and the classic Saaz pilsener hop. After a long secondary fermentation, the Tripel is bottled with a dose of sugar and yeast. It is a memorable drink with hints of fruit and pepper. This beer holds up well in the bottle over time and seems to soften with age.

ORDINARY BROTHERS
EXTRAORDINARY BEERS

What started as a dream for two ordinary brothers who loved beer has become a reality for two ordinary brothers who still love beer. Kurt and Rob Widmer founded Widmer Brothers Brewing Co. in 1984 and helped lead the Pacific Northwest craft beer movement. In 1986, the brothers introduced the first American-style Hefeweizen; today, the unfiltered cloudy beer is the company's signature brew and one of the best selling wheat beers in the country. Widmer Brothers is based in Portland OR, where a portfolio of unique styles are created as the brewers' own delicious interpretations rather than dictated by style guidelines or tradition.

Woodchuck Hard Cider

Middlebury, VT www.woodchuck.com

Back in 1990 in the town of Proctorsville, our little winery set out to create a truly American hard cider – a feat that hadn't really been accomplished in the last 200+ years. Countless changes were made, not the least of which was taking the alcohol content down from 12% to 5%. The Vermontiest of Vermonters are sometimes called "woodchucks" and this seemed like a pretty good name for our small-batch, Vermont-based cider.

Zatec Brewery

Zatec, Czech Republic

www.zatec-brewery.com, www.merchantduvin.com

For a thousand years, the Zatec region west of Prague has been known for the fine quality of its hops. These Saaz hops are one of the keys to a beer that has been renowned for centuries. In 1261, the Society of Privileged Brewers was founded in Zatec. The cornerstone was laid for our current brewery in 1798. Before the German occupation, the brewery shut down and the copper kettles were disassembled and buried in a field out of town. After the war, the kettles were reinstalled and brewing recommenced. During the Communist era in Czechoslovakia, the Zatec Brewery was state-run; after the Velvet Revolution of 1989 it was taken over by a local operator.

Ales

Ales are beers fermented at room temperatures to produce a signature fruity aroma and complex flavor. Ales are generally best consumed when young or fresh with some notable exceptions, such as strong ales and barley wines. Ales should be served at cellar temperatures to let the complex flavors and aromas show through. Unfortunately, they are usually served quite cold in the United States.

Golden ales and Canadian style ales are generally straw to gold in color and exhibit a very light and crisp, almost lager-like character. They tend to have a low hop bitterness with a noticeable hop aroma and light malt sweetness.

Brown ales are similar to dark mild ales, but are generally fuller and stronger. English browns have a medium body, dry to sweet maltiness, very little hop flavor or aroma and low, but noticeable fruitiness. American browns are generally more assertive in hop aroma, flavor and bitterness. They have subdued fruitiness and often have a roasted malt character (caramel or chocolate like).

Bitters are the classic English style of draught ale. Bitters range from gold to copper in color and are characterized by the presence of English hop varieties such as Fuggles and East Kent Goldings. Ordinary bitter is the lightest of the style generally having low to medium hop aroma, flavor and bitterness, low to medium malty character and low alcohol content. Special bitter tends to be more robust than ordinary bitter. ESB is characterized by medium to strong hop aroma, flavor and bitterness, and a richer maltiness than special bitter.

English pale ales are traditionally golden to copper in color, have a low to medium maltiness, and a medium to strong hop aroma, flavor and bitterness derived from English hop varieties. Pale ales are not really "pale," the term was originally used to distinguish these ales from porters and stouts. Indeed, it has become a label for many English-style ales, especially recent American interpretations of English ales, including some straw-colored beers.

American pale ales are often a bit heartier than their English counterparts, and full of the exquisite flowery taste and aroma of American hop varieties. Sierra Nevada Pale Ale, the classic example of the style, uses Cascade hops, which contribute a subtle citrus flavor, bringing a refreshing fruitiness to the overall character. Besides hops, the brewers at Sierra Nevada use a careful blend of pale and crystal malts.

Amber/red ale is something of a hybrid style and can vary from light copper to light brown in color. American-variety hops are generally used to produce a high hop aroma, flavor, and bitterness. This style has a medium to high malty character and has a medium to medium-high body.

India pale ales, or IPAs, are noted for their typically intense hop character and generous alcohol content. Alcoholic strength originally aided in preserving the beer for its voyage from Britain to the colonies, and a heavy dose of hops also served to keep the beer fresh and free of bacterial infections over those long dank spells upon the high seas. IPAs can range from pale gold to deep copper in color. Traditional English versions are typified by the use of English-variety hops. Recently, American versions of the style have pushed the edge of the envelope on hop intensity with the use of American-variety hops such as Cascade, Centennial, and Columbus.

Scottish ales are golden amber to brown in color and are characterized by malty caramel flavors. Scottish light ales are light in body, low in alcohol, have a very low bitterness and no hop flavor or aroma. Scottish heavy ales have a stronger malt character, are slightly higher in alcohol and body than Scottish light ales and are balanced with perceptible bitterness. Scottish export ales are more robust than Scottish heavy ales.

Scotch ales are similar to Scottish ales, but are much higher in alcohol and flavor intensity. Scotch ales are overwhelmingly malty and full-bodied, with a clean and balanced alcohol flavor. Scotch ales may be peaty or smoky in character and may have a medium fruity aroma or flavor.

English strong ales are often referred to as old ales due to a long aging process that smooths the alcohol flavors and maltiness. Strong ales range from amber to brown in color. Because strong ales can reach 12% alcohol by volume, they certainly beg to be sipped and savored rather than tossed down with abandon.

Barley wine is often considered the most prized of all ales. You can tell just from the name that these are no ordinary beers. With the strength of wine and the complexity of cognac, these brews show extraordinary richness, depth, and alcoholic warmth. Like fine wines, these beers benefit from aging, which allows their intense flavors to marry and deepen. Barley wines are very similar to English strong ales, but are set apart by hop bitterness that can range from low to assertive and a high residual malty sweetness.

Porters, precursors to stouts, originated in England. Porters benefit from the use of black malt instead of roasted barley featured in stouts. Brown porters are medium to dark brown, have no strong burnt malt characters and have low to medium hop character. Robust porters are black in color, tend to have a roasted malt flavor, medium to high hop bitterness and low to medium hop flavor and aroma.

Stouts come in five major categories, Irish style dry, foreign style, sweet, oatmeal, and imperial. Stouts are black in color with the exception of oatmeal and imperial stouts, which can vary from dark copper to black. Irish style dry stouts are low in alcohol, exhibit a dry roasted bitterness in the finish from roasted barley and have plenty of exuberant head retention. American versions of dry stout tend to be higher in alcohol, hop flavor and aroma. Foreign style stouts are similar to dry stouts, but have a higher alcohol content with an initial malt sweetness followed by strong roasted bitterness in the finish. Sweet stouts (or cream stouts) have low roasted bitterness, low hop character and are usually full bodied with a strong sweet flavor. Oatmeal stouts have medium roasted malt and caramel/chocolate character, moderate bitterness, and generally a mild oatmeal flavor. The addition of oatmeal to a stout sometimes produces a silky texture. Imperial stouts typically have alcohol contents exceeding 8 percent, with an extremely rich malty flavor balanced by assertive hopping, and a fruity-ester character.

Belgian Ales

Known to be one of the oldest styles of brewing in the world, the tradition of Belgian ales began as a means for Trappist monks to live from the work of their own hands, which is the founding rule of every abbey. Eventually, the monks began to make their beer available to the surrounding villages, and by the 19th century were selling the ales to parched local residents. Dubbels have a complex malt flavor and a sweet malt aroma. Tripels are lighter in color and have more alcoholic strength and flavor. Strong ales may be pale golden to dark brown, are high in alcohol due to the addition of Belgian candy sugar and may exhibit flavors similar to dubbels and tripels.

Wit (or white) is brewed with unmalted and/or malted wheat that produces a refreshingly dry tart flavor. Wits are usually spiced with coriander and bitter orange peel, and pale straw to gold in color. Lambics are some of the most distinctive beers in the world, making use of the natural yeast strains carried in the brewery air to inoculate with the unfiltered breezes that carry wild yeast. Thus, each lambic has a particular character that is completely unique. Fruit lambics are quite popular, and are known for their culinary versatility. Kriek (cherry) pairs nicely with dessert, say a pot de crème of chocolate and berries. Framboise (raspberry), pêche (peach), cassis (black current) also serve as delectable digestifs. Geuze is a blend of young and old lambics, yielding a tart acidity and a complex melding of flavors.

Lagers

Lagers are brewed at cellar temperatures limiting the formation of esters and other fermentation byproducts, producing a clean flavor. Lagers are also aged (or lagered) at near freezing temperatures for up to 3 months. Lagers are the style of beer most popular in America, although the version most often consumed is nothing like the European counterparts.

Pilseners originated in the town of Pilsen, of the Czech Republic, and are the classic light lagers from which the American tradition, typified by “Budmilooors,” springs. The most classic pilseners, however, exhibit such delicacy of maltiness and subtlety of hop flavor that the style has been done a disservice by the American mega breweries. German style pilseners have a high hop bitterness, moderate hop flavor and aroma, and are light straw/golden in color. Bohemian pilseners are more full-bodied, slightly sweeter and more malty than German pilseners and may be light amber in color. Bohemian pilseners are typified by the use of Czech Saaz hops. Original American style pilseners or pre-prohibition pilseners are made using up to 25% corn. The corn produces a slightly sweet flavor and aroma. Pre-prohibition pilseners have medium to high hop flavor, aroma, and bitterness.

German light lagers, called Munich style helles and dortmunder/European export, are similar to pilseners but are less aggressively hopped, and are soft and pleasantly drinkable. Dortmunder tends to be slightly higher in alcohol and more deep golden.

Munich style dunkels (or German dark lagers) have pronounced malty aroma and flavor that dominates over a clean crisp moderate hop bitterness. They can be chocolaty, chewy, and often exhibit a bread-like aroma, from the use of Munich malt. Colors range from light brown to dark brown.

Bock is a traditional German style full of flavor and complexity. Proverbially associated with the billy goat, from the word “bock” in German, this style typically has an assertive alcoholic kick. Strong and malty, ranging in color from deep copper to dark brown, bocks commonly denote the coming of spring. Helles bocks are lighter in color and lower in alcohol content and hop bitterness. Doppelbocks are generally stronger in malt character and alcohol. Brews of this style are named with the “ator” suffix, as in “Terminator.”

German style Märzens or Oktoberfests are malty yet slightly hoppy full-bodied beers that range from golden to reddish brown in color. These beers were originally brewed in March and cellared over the summer months to be savored as the first leaves of autumn hit the ground.

Mixed Styles

Dusseldorf-style altbier is a copper to brown German ale associated with the town of Dusseldorf, where it is bountifully brewed. Altbier may be highly hopped and demonstrate a balanced maltiness, yet remain crisp and clean from cold maturation. Alaskan Amber is brewed to this style.

American-style wheat beers range from straw to dark brown in color and can be brewed with ale or lager yeast. Versions that are bottled with yeast are called hefeweizens (“hefe” meaning yeast in German) and therefore may be cloudy. American wheat beers generally have low to medium hop character and are low to medium bodied. Dark versions often exhibit chocolate, caramel, or toffee characters.

German style wheat beers are characterized by unique clovelike-phenolic and fruity-estery banana aromas produced by particular strains of brewing yeast. German style wheat beers are highly carbonated, have low hop character and are brewed using at least 50% malted wheat.

German style hefeweizens are very pale to light amber in color, medium bodied and may appear cloudy due to the presence of yeast. German style dunkelweizens are characterized by sweet maltiness and chocolate overtones from roasted malt. German style weizenbocks can be either pale or dark and are much higher in alcohol content. Hop bitterness, flavor and aroma remain low.

Smoked beers originated in Bamberg, Germany, and are called rauchbiers in German. The malt for these beers is kilned over a fire and absorbs the dark, husky aromas associated with beechwood, peat, alder, or oak. These brews are full-bodied with plenty of smoky aroma and are amber to dark copper in color. Variations of the original rauchbier are vast including smoked porter, brewed by Alaskan Brewing.

Steam beer, also known as California Common Beer, uses lager yeast fermented at warm temperatures, but is cold matured. Anchor Brewing’s Anchor Steam Beer is the classic example of this style. Light amber to copper in color, with a toasty, caramel maltiness and plenty of hop bitterness, this style is often said to be the only style of beer indigenous to the United States.

Winter warmers are generally amber to brown in color and are brewed with ale or lager yeast. They are brewed seasonally as a way for the brewery and brewer to express their appreciation and love of beer. Winter warmers often exhibit strong and complex maltiness along with low to assertive hop characters. Spices and other special ingredients are often added to increase complexity.
