welcome

In Alaska, there are 68,500 people affected by diabetes and over 25,000 of them do not even know it! Services provided by the American Diabetes Association serving Alaska have never been in greater demand. Some of the major programs include free education, counseling and referral services to people throughout the state, public information and screening, professional education and a summer camp program for children with diabetes. In addition the Association acts as an advocate for Alaskans affected by diabetes in cases of discrimination and is proactive in identifying and resolving social issues impacting people with diabetes.

Funds raised at the Great Alaska Beer and Barley Wine Festival benefit the children in Alaska who have diabetes. There are children from communities all over Alaska who attend the summer camp program which provides the opportunity to interact with other children who have diabetes and experience all the usual camp activities while learning how to control diabetes. Children who learn how to take care of themselves are less likely to develop the devastating complications of diabetes and lead healthier lives. The partnership between Aurora Productions and the American Diabetes Association makes a difference in the lives of Alaskans who have diabetes.

For more information, call 272-1424 or 1-888-DIABETES or go to www.diabetes.org.

John Maier was born in Riverside, CA in 1955, John originally moved to Portland, OR as a child in 1962. Later, he moved to Vista, CA after graduating from Vista High School in 1973. Afterwards, he attended the Devry Institute of Technology (Phoenix, AZ) and graduated in 1975. John was employed by Hughes Aircraft Co. in El Segundo, CA from 1975 to 1986 as a Senior Electronic Technician. While there, he worked on the F-14 Tomcat Radar System. In the Fall of 1986, John attended the Siebel Institute of Technology and graduated from their 50th course in Brewing Technology. That same year he brewed a Barleywine that won the American Homebrewer Association's Homebrewer of the Year Award. The Alaskan Brewery in Juneau hired John as an Assistant Brewmaster in March of 1987. He left in May of 1989. John was there for the very first brew at the Rogue Ales Brewery in Newport, Oregon. His Ales, Porters, Stouts, and Lagers have won over 450+ awards for excellence and taste.

Jim Roberts on beer

This year's Great Alaska Beer and Barleywine Festival celebrates 23 years of the good life in Alaska beer. I've been to each of these celebrations and I'll never miss one. I'm glad you're here.

Let's go back almost a quarter of a century. In 1993, craft beer was robust in the Lower 48 states, but infant here. Alaskan Brewing Company represented our state, but Midnight Sun, Glacier Brewhouse, 49th State, King Street and the rest of our 30 licensed breweries and brewpubs weren't even dreams back then. More than a dozen have come and gone. Who remembers Railway Brewing Company, Borealis, Cusack's and the Regal Eagle, to name a few?

Since then, this event stands out as the one that holds the history of great beer up here. If you're reading this, you're making history by being here. Beer festivals come and go. Credit Aurora Productions for formalizing the celebration of beer in Alaska.

Who cares? Although you should, if this is your first year, what's before you is a tapestry of beer that you'll never experience anywhere else. You're beer curious and you're in the right place. Check out the section on the west of the floor. Amassed is the only thorough representation of Alaska beer you'll ever find in one place. This event brings in more Alaska beer and brewers than any other. Start there: chances are, you'll never be able to taste our state so fully anywhere else.

For me, seeing most of Alaska's geographically dispersed breweries come together all at once every year is like a family reunion. I haven't been to every brewery in this state, but if there's one place I can experience each of them, it's right here. That's my draw, and it should be yours too.

From there, you have unlimited choices. What are you chasing? IPAs? Compare what our friends from down south bring up with what we enjoy every day. Are you looking for the bigger beers that define the season? There's more barley wine on the festival floor than you'll find anywhere else. The best of the best shows up right here every year. From the tame to the insane, it's right in front of you. What do you want to learn about? This is as educational as it is entertaining. This program is your notebook; scribble all over it and keep it. I've got a wad of these I refer to time and time again and chuckle at my notes year after year.

As a seasoned imbibor, I implore you to experience this foamy grandeur the right way. After 23 years, I've learned that this is truly a designated driver event. I get dropped off down here and have a ride home. If you're doing anything less, you're putting yourself at risk and doing the beer community a huge disservice.

Patience, my beer loving friend; you'll get your pour. Temper your excitement with respect for others, knowing that not every beer poured for you hits your palate the right way, and that your servers only want to make you satisfied and happy.

Come away from this enlightened. After damned near a quarter of a century, every year at the Great Alaska Beer and Barleywine Festival is a treat for me. I learn something new every year, I get beer I've never had before, and I relish in the celebration of great beer in Alaska, from near and far.

21st Amendment

San Francisco, CA | www.21st-amendment.com

21ST SAN FRANCISCO AMENDMENT

In 2000, Nico Freccia and Shaun O'Sullivan founded the 21st Amendment Brewery in San Francisco's historic South

Park neighborhood. The popular brewpub is now at the heart of the new city center and only two blocks from the San Francisco Giants baseball park. Around the turn of the 20th century, in the year 1900, there were about 40 breweries operating just within the city limits of San Francisco (by comparison, today there are eight with a population more than double what it was in 1900). They realized that the brewery captured the essence of the neighborhoods of San Francisco. Places that provided something unique—hand crafted beer that was different at every brewery and that defined the taste of a neighborhood. In 1920, Prohibition wiped out this culture and put the “local” out of business. For 13 years, social interaction was largely driven underground, to the speakeasies, where regular citizens became a nation of outlaws.

ALASKAN BREWING CO.

From the explorers of the 1700's through the Gold Rush, many a thirsty Alaskan has been able to enjoy locally made beers. In 1986, 28 year-olds Marcy and Geoff Larson reignited that tradition when they opened the Alaskan Brewing Co., the 67th independent brewery in the country and the first brewery in Juneau since Prohibition. Alaskan beers reflect many of the same characteristics of those brewed during the gold rush era. From the historically-based Alaskan Amber to alder-smoked malts and Sitka spruce tips, Alaskan beers reflect Juneau's brewing history and innovation.

Bocq

Brasserie Du Bocq, Purnode, Walonia, Belgium
www.merchantduvin.com

In 1858, Martin Belot - a farmer in the village of Purnode, Belgium - began to brew beer during the winter months: there was an excellent well near the farm, and brewing was the perfect activity for winter, when there was little work in the fields. A wide range of different beers was offered, and sales in the the area around the brewery grew. In 1960, farming ceased at Du Bocq so the family could concentrate only on brewing, focusing on traditional, bottle-conditioned Belgian ales. The brewery is still owned by descendants of the original family.

Brabandere

Brouwerij De Brabandere, Bavikhove, W. Flanders, Belgium | www.globalbeer.com

Bavikhove is Germanic and means “the farm of the people of Bavo”. It is believed that the village must have been founded in the 4th or 5th century, when German tribes settled in the area. The first historical texts about this village are dated 1120. In 1894, the De Brabandere family began brewing beer. The German army confiscated and closed the brewery during WW I. After the war, Joseph De Brabandere reopened the brewery which was operated after his death in 1929 by his wife Gabrielle Vandeghinste.

She expanded the brewery considerably, convincing the Germans to keep the brewery open during WW II. Joseph’s and Gabrielle’s children modernized the brewery and expanded markets. The mineral water for beer comes out of a natural well and is used to brew 80,000 barrels of beer per year, making the brands of Bavik and De Brabandere the largest brewery network of West Flanders.

Deschutes Brewery

Bend, OR | www.deschutesbrewery.com

Deschutes is in the business of daring people to expect more from beer. We started off in 1988 on the banks of the Deschutes River in Bend, Oregon selling Black Butte Porter when others were sure a dark beer would never catch on. Our brewers love to push the envelope, especially if it makes someone nervous. For us, the highest praise is a raised glass and a toast of "Bravely Done!"

Firestone Walker Brewing Co.

Paso Robles, CA | www.firestonebeer.com

Firestone Walker Brewing Company began as a small brewery on California's Central Coast. Now a regional brewery, their singular purpose remains – to craft ever better beer. They integrate traditional brewing discipline, a fascination with wooden barrels and a passion for the craft to create some of the most awarded beers in the world. A commitment to balanced and unique beers has helped fuel the revolution in taste that is sweeping across America. Solidly committed to the unattainable goal of brewing the perfect beer, the brewery has been awarded Champion mid-Sized Brewery at the World Beer Cup an unprecedented four times. Firestone's also won Mid-sized Brewery of the Year at the Great American Beer Festival an equally amazing three times.

Founders Brewing Co.

Grand Rapids, MI | www.foundersbrewing.com

Established in 1997 by two craft beer enthusiasts—Dave Engbers and Mike Stevens—Founders Brewing Co. started brewing complex, in-your-face ales, with huge aromatics and tons of flavor. Embracing innovation they introduced the craft beer Session category with All Day IPA, created the first Breakfast Stout and maintains the country's largest Bourbon barrel aged beer program. Founders ranks among the top 12 largest craft breweries in the U.S. and is consistently one of the fastest growing. The brewery has received numerous awards and RateBeer and BeerAdvocate users rate its beers among the best in the world. | MORE |

Green Flash Brewing Co.

San Diego, CA | www.greenflashbrew.com

Green Flash Brewing Co. was founded in 2002 by Mike and Lisa Hinkley. We are an award-winning brewer of fine, hand-crafted ales, and specialize in brewing assertive and distinctive beers, such as our West Coast I.P.A.: an award-winning beer whose wide acceptance has helped define a category. We also brew seasonal and special offerings, including several barrel-aged beers, throughout the year. Green flashes are real phenomena seen at sunrise and sunset, when part of the sun suddenly changes color. Green flashes usually are brief, lasting only one or two seconds. Green flashes do not always light up the sky, but are often small and inconspicuous. To see green flashes, you must be in the right place. An ocean horizon can often provide optimum green flash viewing conditions. We hope you will be fortunate enough to see a Green Flash. We know you will have fun trying!

Southwest of Brussels, in the quiet Belgian town of Vlezenbeek, the Lindemans family has been farming and homebrewing as long as anyone can remember.

Commercial brewing started in 1811 in their barn-like brewery. Lambic, or spontaneously fermented beers, are among the world's rarest. Made from local barley malt, unmalted wheat, aged hops and wild, airborne local yeast, these products mature in oak for nearly two years prior to release. Fruit is frequently added during secondary fermentation.

The Abbey of St.-Remy in Rochefort was founded in 1230 and began to brew beer in 1595. To this day, the modest size of the brewery means that the Trappist monks and their fellow workers can perfectly control the production process. Beer connoisseurs hold the top-fermented, bottle-conditioned brown ales from this brewery in the highest regard. Rochefort 6, sometimes called "Red Cap," has a firm body with an unrestrained malty flavor and long finish; the bouquet holds fruity yeast notes. Rochefort 8, or "Green Cap," is a full-bodied, rich ale with compelling flavors of spice, bittersweet chocolate, figs and leather. Rochefort 10, "Blue Cap," packs incendiary flavors—notes of earth, fire, port wine, violets.

Rodenbach

Roeselare, W. Flanders, Belgium | www.latisimports.com

RODENBACH

Welcome to the world famous Flemish Sour Ales of Brewery Rodenbach, where patience isn't just a virtue - it's a way of life. Like fine wine, or single-malt whiskey, Rodenbach matures its ale in large oak vats for close to two years, where it develops tart, sour flavors which are softened by spicy, woody notes from the oak. Rodenbach's ales are light, effervescent, and highly quaffable, making them the perfect, palate-refreshing complement to a wide variety of foods.

A great family, a great beer. Rodenbach is rooted in a family tradition going back to 1714. Rodenbach is one of the world's most unique breweries, but above all a brewery where some of the world's most exceptional beers are produced. Incredibly, it was the blind Alexander who started the brewery and laid the foundations for its success. Losing his sight in a shooting gallery accident at the age of 11 proved to be no handicap to his tireless spirit, which would lead him to be elected mayor of Roeselare, and eventually into the first National Congress of Belgium. As a parliamentarian, he dedicated himself to the construction of canals and railways through West Flanders, which, in turn, ensured an economically vibrant Roeselare. In 1820, he bought a local brewery, the St. George, and rechristened it Brewery Rodenbach. The rest, as they say, is history.

Acclaimed beer connoisseur Michael Jackson calls Rodenbach "the most refreshing beer in the world." Rodenbach Classic's characteristic taste is achieved through its unique fermentation process, whereby top yeasts and bacterial flora undergo 24 months of maturation in 150 year old oak casks, resulting in the distinctively gentle sour taste for which it is known and loved. | MORE |

Rodenbach Grand Cru (Alc. 6% Vol.) is a blend of “young” beer (33%) and an older beer (67%) that has matured in oak vats. It is the high percentage of the older ripened-in-oak beer that gives it the complex and intense bouquet with a very long aftertaste like a Grand Cru wine. This is a complex beer with lots of wood and fruity esters, wine-like and with a balsamic vinegar aroma. A sharp taste, fruity, refreshing and with a balanced Madeira-like sweetness. The late Michael Jackson bestowed upon this beer the titles of “World Classic” and “the Burgundy of Belgium.”

Brasserie St. Feuillien, Le Roeulx, Belgium
www.artisanalimports.com/breweries.asp

Since 1873, the Friart family has been brewing various beers, among others, the St-Feuillien. But the history of this beer goes back even further. In the 7th century an Irish monk named Feuillien came to the Continent to preach the Gospel. Unfortunately, while traveling across the territory of what is now the town of Le Roeulx, Feuillien was martyred and beheaded. On the site of his martyrdom, Feuillien's disciples erected a chapel which, in 1125 became the Abbey of Prémontrés, but later became known as the Abbaye St-Feuillien du Roeulx.

The Abbey prospered until the upheavals of the French Revolution. During these troubled times, it was condemned by the revolutionaries. For centuries, monks have brewed beer and this tradition has been preserved until this very day. Fourth generation of brewers for the Friart family, but still the same passion and know-how.

2 Towns Ciderhouse started with the goal of bringing hard cider back to the people. With deep roots in American history, true craft cider deserves to be made with purpose and respect.

Once the most popular drink in America, cider is making a comeback, and we are proud to be a part of this resurgence. We planted our own orchard in 2012, and continue to support other local apple growers by insisting on using only the finest fresh pressed-100% NW apples in our ciders.

Traquair House Brewery 1491

Innerleithen, Peeblesshire, Scotland

www.traquair.co.uk or www.merchantduvin.com

This barleywine-style "Scotch ale" is produced in a tiny brewery at Traquair, the oldest inhabited house in Scotland, dating back to 1107 AD when it was a hunting lodge for the kings of Scotland. It has had descendants of the same family living in it from 1491 to the present day. When Mary Queen of Scots visited in 1566, Traquair was already brewing their famous strong ale.

Some time after 1800, brewing ceased at Traquair. The original brewery equipment remained on the estate, idle until the 20th Laird of Traquair, Peter Maxwell Stuart, discovered the recipe and restored the brewery in 1965. The copper brewkettle at Traquair is over 200 years old and beer is made in the traditional manner — using oak fermenting vessels, which contribute to the deep, unique character of these beers. Traquair is a pure-malt ale that can accompany or replace pure-malt whiskey.

Unibroue

Chambly, Quebec, Canada | www.unibroue.com

Brewed using an age-old process of in-bottle refermentation, they are only partially filtered rather than totally filtered (which is the norm in today's beer industry). This means Unibroue beers keep all their protein and part of the yeast, producing a genuine upscale beer. These beers are on fresh lees. The lees deposit themselves at the bottom of the bottle as result of refermentation and natural carbonation. The process is the same as with champagne; except with champagne, the yeast is removed, while with Unibroue beers the lees are left in the bottle. This method gives a very particular taste to the beer and provides a natural source of vitamin B. Every single beer is brewed in one batch and is not water-softened.

Unibroue's brewing methods were inspired by the great European brewing traditions and, in this respect, are one of a kind in North America. Our brewing methods are time consuming and costly. Given that the beers contain no chemical additives or preservatives, they require strict quality control. This all-natural brewing process is also why our beers are higher in alcohol content and can provide a rich flavour without the bitter aftertaste of conventional beers. Moreover, they have a longer shelf life and adapt very well to the room temperatures, unlike conventional beers. Among its most important achievements, Unibroue was classified among the ten best breweries in the world in 1995 and 1996 by The Beverage Testing Institute of Chicago, which is known as the main reference in the brewing industry.

The beginnings of brewery Van Honsebrouck can be traced to Werken, where Amandus Van Honsebrouck (1811-1865) was mayor and ran a farmstead with dairy farm, brewery and distillery. He was married to Virginie Carbonnez with whom, like a good Catholic, he had no fewer than fourteen children, many of whom were destined to become active in the brewery trade.

Like many others of its kind, this brewery originated from a ploughland farm that brewed beer for its own consumption. The brewery first appears in the historical record in 1784 under the name of "Brouwerij De Peer," although it is likely there had been a brewery long before that time. Gradually, brewing became the farm's main pursuit and eventually all agricultural activities were abandoned. The brewery continued production through the two world wars, a period that saw the end of hundreds of Flemish village breweries. The brewery experienced explosive growth and in 1978, purchased the recipe and yeasts from the Augustine monks in Gent who licensed them to produce their beer. Today Augustijn ale is the brewery's show-piece, along with other artisanal beers such as Gulden Draak and Piraat. These age-old brews are now produced in a state-of-the-art computerized and automated brewery.

Weihenstephan

Freising, Bavaria, Germany | www.weihenstephaner.de

The World's oldest continuously operating brewery?

The Weihenstephan Brewery can trace its roots at the abbey to the year 768, as a document from that year refers to a hop garden in the area paying a tithe to the monastery. A brewery was actually licensed by the City of Freising in 1040, and that is the founding date claimed by today's modern brewery. The brewery thus has a credible claim to being the oldest working brewery in the world. (Weltenburg Abbey, also in Bavaria, was founded around 620, and also claims to be the oldest brewery in the world.) When the monastery and brewery were secularized under Napoleon Bonaparte in 1803, they became possessions of the State of Bavaria.

Ales

Ales are beers fermented at room temperatures to produce a signature fruity aroma and complex flavor. Ales are generally best consumed when young or fresh with some notable exceptions, such as strong ales and barley wines. Ales should be served at cellar temperatures to let the complex flavors and aromas show through. Unfortunately, they are usually served quite cold in the United States.

Golden ales and Canadian style ales are generally straw to gold in color and exhibit a very light and crisp, almost lager-like character. They tend to have a low hop bitterness with a noticeable hop aroma and light malt sweetness.

Brown ales are similar to dark mild ales, but are generally fuller and stronger. English browns have a medium body, dry to sweet maltiness, very little hop flavor or aroma and low, but noticeable fruitiness. American browns are generally more assertive in hop aroma, flavor and bitterness. They have subdued fruitiness and often have a roasted malt character (caramel or chocolate like).

Bitters are the classic English style of draught ale. Bitters range from gold to copper in color and are characterized by the presence of English hop varieties such as Fuggles and East Kent Goldings. Ordinary bitter is the lightest of the style generally having low to medium hop aroma, flavor and bitterness, low to medium malt character and low alcohol content. Special bitter tends to be more robust than ordinary bitter. ESB is characterized by medium to strong hop aroma, flavor and bitterness, and a richer maltiness than special bitter.

English pale ales are traditionally golden to copper in color, have a low to medium maltiness, and a medium to strong hop aroma, flavor and bitterness derived from English hop varieties. Pale ales are not really "pale," the term was originally used to distinguish these ales from porters and stouts. Indeed, it has become a label for many English-style ales, especially recent American interpretations of English ales, including some straw-colored beers.

American pale ales are often a bit heartier than their English counterparts, and full of the exquisite flowery taste and aroma of American hop varieties. Sierra Nevada Pale Ale, the classic example of the style, uses Cascade hops, which contribute a subtle citrus flavor, bringing a refreshing fruitiness to the overall character. Besides hops, the brewers at Sierra Nevada use a careful blend of pale and crystal malts.

Amber/red ale is something of a hybrid style and can vary from light copper to light brown in color. American-variety hops are generally used to produce a high hop aroma, flavor, and bitterness. This style has a medium to high malty character and has a medium to medium-high body.

India pale ales, or IPAs, are noted for their typically intense hop character and generous alcohol content. Alcoholic strength originally aided in preserving the beer for its voyage from Britain to the colonies, and a heavy dose of hops also served to keep the beer fresh and free of bacterial infections over those long dank spells upon the high seas. IPAs can range from pale gold to deep copper in color. Traditional English versions are typified by the use of English-variety hops. Recently, American versions of the style have pushed the edge of the envelope on hop intensity with the use of American-variety hops such as Cascade, Centennial, and Columbus.

Scottish ales are golden amber to brown in color and are characterized by malty caramel flavors. Scottish light ales are light in body, low in alcohol, have a very low bitterness and no hop flavor or aroma. Scottish heavy ales have a stronger malt character, are slightly higher in alcohol and body than Scottish light ales and are balanced with perceptible bitterness. Scottish export ales are more robust than Scottish heavy ales.

Scotch ales are similar to Scottish ales, but are much higher in alcohol and flavor intensity. Scotch ales are overwhelmingly malty and full-bodied, with a clean and balanced alcohol flavor. Scotch ales may be peaty or smoky in character and may have a medium fruity aroma or flavor.

English strong ales are often referred to as old ales due to a long aging process that smooths the alcohol flavors and maltiness. Strong ales range from amber to brown in color. Because strong ales can reach 12% alcohol by volume, they certainly beg to be sipped and savored rather than tossed down with abandon.

Barley wine is often considered the most prized of all ales. You can tell just from the name that these are no ordinary beers. With the strength of wine and the complexity of cognac, these brews show extraordinary richness, depth, and alcoholic warmth. Like fine wines, these beers benefit from aging, which allows their intense flavors to marry and deepen. Barley wines are very similar to English strong ales, but are set apart by hop bitterness that can range from low to assertive and a high residual malty sweetness.

Porters, precursors to stouts, originated in England. Porters benefit from the use of black malt instead of roasted barley featured in stouts. Brown porters are medium to dark brown, have no strong burnt malt characters and have low to medium hop character. Robust porters are black in color, tend to have a roasted malt flavor, medium to high hop bitterness and low to medium hop flavor and aroma.

Stouts come in five major categories, Irish style dry, foreign style, sweet, oatmeal, and imperial. Stouts are black in color with the exception of oatmeal and imperial stouts, which can vary from dark copper to black. Irish style dry stouts are low in alcohol, exhibit a dry roasted bitterness in the finish from roasted barley and have plenty of exuberant head retention. American versions of dry stout tend to be higher in alcohol, hop flavor and aroma. Foreign style stouts are similar to dry stouts, but have a higher alcohol content with an initial malt sweetness followed by strong roasted bitterness in the finish. Sweet stouts (or cream stouts) have low roasted bitterness, low hop character and are usually full bodied with a strong sweet flavor. Oatmeal stouts have medium roasted malt and caramel/chocolate character, moderate bitterness, and generally a mild oatmeal flavor. The addition of oatmeal to a stout sometimes produces a silky texture. Imperial stouts typically have alcohol contents exceeding 8 percent, with an extremely rich malty flavor balanced by assertive hopping, and a fruity-ester character.

Belgian Ales

Known to be one of the oldest styles of brewing in the world, the tradition of Belgian ales began as a means for Trappist monks to live from the work of their own hands, which is the founding rule of every abbey. Eventually, the monks began to make their beer available to the surrounding villages, and by the 19th century were selling the ales to parched local residents. Dubbels have a complex malt flavor and a sweet malt aroma. Tripels are lighter in color and have more alcoholic strength and flavor. Strong ales may be pale golden to dark brown, are high in alcohol due to the addition of Belgian candy sugar and may exhibit flavors similar to dubbels and tripels.

Wit (or white) is brewed with unmalted and/or malted wheat that produces a refreshingly dry tart flavor. Wits are usually spiced with coriander and bitter orange peel, and pale straw to gold in color. Lambics are some of the most distinctive beers in the world, making use of the natural yeast strains carried in the brewery air to inoculate with the unfiltered breezes that carry wild yeast. Thus, each lambic has a particular character that is completely unique. Fruit lambics are quite popular, and are known for their culinary versatility. Kriek (cherry) pairs nicely with dessert, say a pot de crème of chocolate and berries. Framboise (raspberry), pêche (peach), cassis (black current) also serve as delectable digestifs. Gueuze is a blend of young and old lambics, yielding a tart acidity and a complex melding of flavors.

Lagers

Lagers are brewed at cellar temperatures limiting the formation of esters and other fermentation byproducts, producing a clean flavor. Lagers are also aged (or lagered) at near freezing temperatures for up to 3 months. Lagers are the style of beer most popular in America, although the version most often consumed is nothing like the European counterparts.

Pilseners originated in the town of Pilsen, of the Czech Republic, and are the classic light lagers from which the American tradition, typified by “Budmilooors,” springs. The most classic pilseners, however, exhibit such delicacy of maltiness and subtlety of hop flavor that the style has been done a disservice by the American mega breweries.

German style pilseners have a high hop bitterness, moderate hop flavor and aroma, and are light straw/golden in color. Bohemian pilseners are more full-bodied, slightly sweeter and more malty than German pilseners and may be light amber in color. Bohemian pilseners are typified by the use of Czech Saaz hops. Original American style pilseners or pre-prohibition pilseners are made using up to 25% corn. The corn produces a slightly sweet flavor and aroma. Pre-prohibition pilseners have medium to high hop flavor, aroma, and bitterness.

German light lagers, called Munich style helles and dortmunder/European export, are similar to pilseners but are less aggressively hopped, and are soft and pleasantly drinkable. Dortmunder tends to be slightly higher in alcohol and more deep golden.

Munich style dunkels (or German dark lagers) have pronounced malty aroma and flavor that dominates over a clean crisp moderate hop bitterness. They can be chocolaty, chewy, and often exhibit a bread-like aroma, from the use of Munich malt. Colors range from light brown to dark brown.

Bock is a traditional German style full of flavor and complexity. Proverbially associated with the billy goat, from the word “bock” in German, this style typically has an assertive alcoholic kick. Strong and malty, ranging in color from deep copper to dark brown, bocks commonly denote the coming of spring. Helles bocks are lighter in color and lower in alcohol content and hop bitterness. Doppelbocks are generally stronger in malt character and alcohol. Brews of this style are named with the “ator” suffix, as in “Terminator.”

German style Märzens or Oktoberfests are malty yet slightly hoppy full-bodied beers that range from golden to reddish brown in color. These beers were originally brewed in March and cellared over the summer months to be savored as the first leaves of autumn hit the ground.

Mixed Styles

Dusseldorf-style altbier is a copper to brown German ale associated with the town of Dusseldorf, where it is bountifully brewed. Altbier may be highly hopped and demonstrate a balanced maltiness, yet remain crisp and clean from cold maturation. Alaskan Amber is brewed to this style.

American-style wheat beers range from straw to dark brown in color and can be brewed with ale or lager yeast. Versions that are bottled with yeast are called hefeweizens (“hefe” meaning yeast in German) and therefore may be cloudy. American wheat beers generally have low to medium hop character and are low to medium bodied. Dark versions often exhibit chocolate, caramel, or toffee characters.

German style wheat beers are characterized by unique clovelike-phenolic and fruity-estery banana aromas produced by particular strains of brewing yeast. German style wheat beers are highly carbonated, have low hop character and are brewed using at least 50% malted wheat.

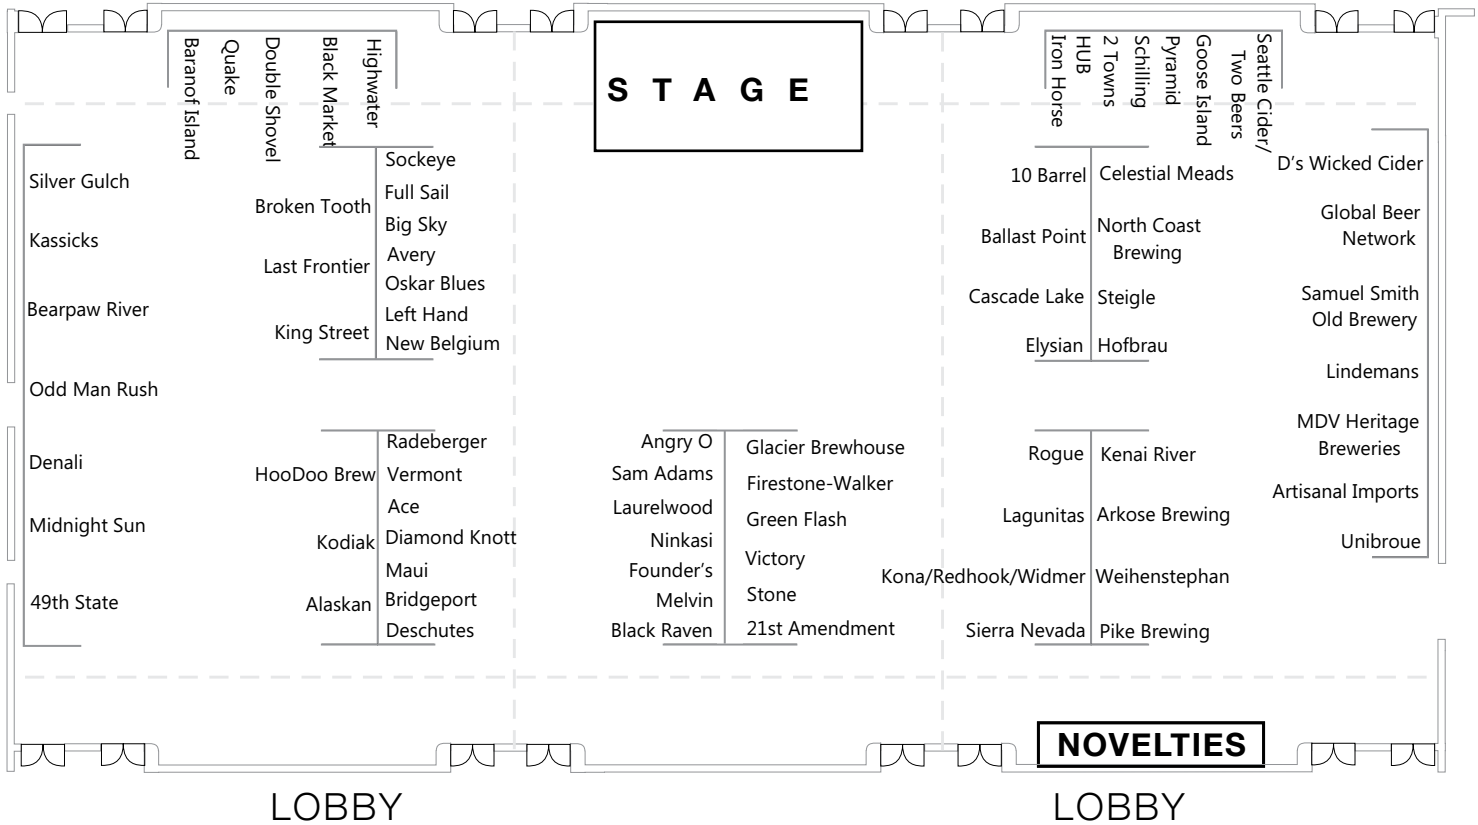

German style hefeweizens are very pale to light amber in color, medium bodied and may appear cloudy due to the presence of yeast. German style dunkelweizens are characterized by sweet maltiness and chocolate overtones from roasted malt. German style weizenbocks can be either pale or dark and are much higher in alcohol content. Hop bitterness, flavor and aroma remain low.

Smoked beers originated in Bamberg, Germany, and are called rauchbiers in German. The malt for these beers is kilned over a fire and absorbs the dark, husky aromas associated with beechwood, peat, alder, or oak. These brews are full-bodied with plenty of smoky aroma and are amber to dark copper in color. Variations of the original rauchbier are vast including smoked porter, brewed by Alaskan Brewing.

Steam beer, also known as California Common Beer, uses lager yeast fermented at warm temperatures, but is cold matured. Anchor Brewing’s Anchor Steam Beer is the classic example of this style. Light amber to copper in color, with a toasty, caramel maltiness and plenty of hop bitterness, this style is often said to be the only style of beer indigenous to the United States.

Winter warmers are generally amber to brown in color and are brewed with ale or lager yeast. They are brewed seasonally as a way for the brewery and brewer to express their appreciation and love of beer. Winter warmers often exhibit strong and complex maltiness along with low to assertive hop characters. Spices and other special ingredients are often added to increase complexity.
